The Connecticut Election.

THE Connecticut election is so close as to afford no evidence of any change in popular sentiment upon the great political issues of the day. There are numberless influences constantly operating among large masses of men sufficient to change two or three hundred votes out of a hundred thousand, which is all that this election indicates, without any change in the general political sentiment being manifested. In this instance the Democratic candidate was assisted by the Federal Administration, by Senators Dixon and Foster, who were elevated to power by the Republicans, and by many other officeholders who were looking out for their "bread and butter." A very direct and powerful effort was also made by the Democrats to turn the eight-hour movement to political account, and probably with some effect. It is not unlikely, too, that the hue and cry raised against P. T. Barnum may have lost us something on the general vote. Those portions of the State, too, where the Democratic vote is heaviest, are those most directly under the influence of New York city. Any or all of these influences are sufficient to account for the slight change of three or four hundred votes that has occurred. So far as great national questions are concerned, the vote amounts to nothing whatever. English was run mainly on his own abolition record in voting in Congress for the Constitutional amendment abolishing slavery, and not on that of his party. The simon-pure Copperheads had to stand back, and let a man run who was less obnoxious to popular sentiment than themselves, and whose greatest claim to support was that he had acted with the Republicans on the great test question of the abolition of slavery. The election of such a man by only three hundred majority does not look like any very alarming change in public sentiment. And, as we remarked last Saturday, the result in Connecticut makes no perceptible impression upon the great Union majority in the nation. We may lose now and then a State in the North, now and then a Congressman, but we shall more than make up for their loss in the reconstructed States of the South. In a comprehensive view, it would, South. In a comprehensive view, it would, perhaps, be well if a few small Northern States should be carried by the Democrats, so as to deprive their party of its intensely sectional character, and give it some few elements of nationality. That one of these should be a New England State is desirable, to soften the sectional animosity felt towards that part of our country by the Democratic party. If they could now and then carry a New England State, they might not be so anxious to "leave New England out in the cold."

The Elections Yesterday.

Elections were held yesterday in Michigan, Ohio, and Connecticut.

In Michigan the Republicans carry the State as usual, electing, among other officers, a majority of the Constitutional Convention to frame a new Constitution for the State.

In Ohio municipal elections only were held, and in these the Republicans exhibit their usual strength. Cincinnati elects the whole Union ticket by 5000 majority, and gains are exhibited in Columbus and other places. In Connecticut the Republicans elect both branches of the Legislature, but lose the Governor by a very close vote, and three of the Congressional Districts.

THE "TRIBUNE," "HERALD," AND "WORLD" ON CONNECTICUT.

The result in Connecticut, while it has surprised no one who has been watching the contest, has created various opinions in regard to its cause in the breasts of the Republicans, Conservatives, and Democrats. Each looks upon it as the result of different agencies, and it is amusing to see the way in which the election is received. The calm determination of the Radicals, the all-wise Bunsbyism of the Conservatives, and the wild exultation of the Democrats, each shows the feelings of the parties. A good index is afforded us in the tone, this morning, of the N. Y. Tribune, Herald, and World, fit types of the various parties. The Tribune says:-

"The time has been when a Copperhead victory in Connecticut would have seriously injured the cause of the Union. We should have esteemed the election of Thomas H. Seymour over Governor Buckingham, in 1863 or 1884, a national calamity. The war had not been fought through, and a Rebelvictory on Northern soil always seemed more disastrous in its influence than any that the cohorts of Lee could win in Virginia. The election of Horatio Sey-mour in New York over the lamented mour in New York over the lamented Wadsworth was a reinforcement of ten thousand men to the Rebel armies, Con-necticut can do no such mischief to-day, The mischief she does is mainly within her own borders. She has put good men out of office and bad men in. She rejects a gallant Union soldier for a member of that party which throughout the war reserved its admiration for soldiers on the other side, and which, since soldiers on the other side, and which, since the war, fills its partisan presses with eulogies of Robert E. Lee. We regret Governor Hawley's defeat, but we think he can afford it better than the State can. The influence of this Copperhead victory, so far as it is felt at all outside the State limits, will be most barmful at the South. It may possibly retard to some degree the growth, now becoming rapid, of a healthy pointical sentiment, and hinder reconstruction upon the basis of the existing law. There will be found demagogues to assure the people of the South that this is the beginning of a great reaction at the North, destined to overturn Congress, and substitute the policy of the President for the policy of the people. There will be some fools to believe this, so here and there Connecticut will be potent to do a little harm by its bad vote of yesterday. It will not be much."

The Tribune ascribes the defeat to the lavish expenditure of money, and states that it is free to say, "that if Mr. English had been as poor a man as Governor Hawley, he would have had no chance whatever of an election." I the market.

It also announces that P. T. Barnum will contest the seat of W. H. Barnum on the groun of gross frauds.

The Herald ascribes the loss of the State entirely to the nomination of Barnum, "the small swindling showman." It says:-

amall swindling showman." It says:—

'The Republicans of Connecticut have sunk under the weight of woolly-horses, Feejes mermalds, old Joyce Heth, learned seals, fat women, living skeletons, dwsrfs, six-legged sheep, double-headed calves, and other monstressities, as the Democrats of New York went down under the load of John Morrissey and Fernando Wood. Hawley owes his defeat to the self-convicted humbug and bogus showman, as Hoffman was indebted for his to the prize-fighter, faro-dealer, and Copperhead. The election of English is not a triumph of Democracy, but a vindication of common decency and morality. For some years Connecticut has cast her vote against the Democracy. That she has now fallen back from grace is to be attributed, not to any abandonment or weakening of Republican principles, but to the simple fact that the dominant party made nominations not fit to be made and abused the trust and confidence of the people. The result in Connecticut may be productive of substantial and important benefit to the country at large. If its lesson shall be read aright it will teach all political parties that, however great the strength they may possess, they cannot hope to outrage the self-respect of a community with impunity. This has been the case in Connecticut; but if the defeat of Hawley through the nomination of Barnum shall have the effect of making all political parties more careful in the selection of their candidates, the result will of making all political parties more careful in the selection of their candidates, the result will not be greatly deplored by any sensible Repub-lican."

The World is wildly exultant. It is perfectly intoxicated with success. It thus pipes unto its followers:-

"This result is in the highest degree gratifying, as indicating a turn in the tide, and the beginning of that great reaction which is to sweep the Republican party ont of power. No attempts which the Republicans may make to explain away this significant and foreboding defeat can be of any avail. It is all in vain to pretend that the success of the Democrats is owing to their introduction of side issues, like the labor question; for the fact that the inundating flood of fanaticism has sufficiently abated to allow such side topics a hearing, is the most trustworthy proof of a reaction. For the last two years it has been dinned into the ears of the country without ceasing that the Democratic party rests under such a load of odium, in consequence of its course during the war, that it can never recover its influence, and that nothing remains for it but to disband, or to take refuge in some coalition, with a change of name. This victory in Connecticut will dispel that illusion. The Democratic party have fought in Connecticut a bold, square, open battle, under their own party flag, through their own party organization, and without the advantage of any Federal patronage or dandling. So far as the battle has been fought on national issues, the victory proves that the Democratic party can meet its war record with advantage in proportion as the passions of the last six years spend their force and subside. So far as the contest has been affected by the introduction of side issues, the result proves that there is no such invincible prejudice against the the contest has been anceted by the introduc-tion of side issues, the result proves that there is no such invincible prejudice against the Democratic party as prevents the working-men rallying to its standard when the country becomes cool enough to attend to other things than the late war and its consequences."

The World concludes its excited article with the declaration that "The Republican party, whether for good or for evil, has accomplished its mission. It must die with the issues which gave it birth and have kept it in power. The nineteen months which intervene between now and the Presidential election will witness the decline and fall of a party which has done more mischief, shed more blood, squandered more treasure, kindled more diabolical passions, and inflicted deeper wounds on constitutional government, than any other political party that ever existed in the world."

Such a dolorous prophecy needs no comment. Time is the only criterion by which false prophets can be judged.

Our State Loan.

THE bids for the State loan of $23,000,000 were opened yesterday, and the best proof afforded that the capitalists of the country have the most implicit faith in the honor of Pennsylvania. About a year since we urged upon our authorities the absolute necessity of at once providing for the payment of the debt of the Commonwealth then overdue. We stated that not only honor but economy demanded such a provision, and favored the plan since so successfully carried out by our able State Treasurer, Hon. William H. Kemble. The worse than negligence which had allowed the loan to mature, and then remain unpaid, had caused a depreciation of our bonds, and the State Sixes were selling far below par. By the simple process of creating a new debt, with which to pay the old one, we have raised the value of the loans of the Commonwealth, and rescued our name from all tinge of dishonor. The fact that while twenty-three millions were wanted over thirty millions were bid for, proves, besides a popular confidence, that there s a large excess of capital lying idle waiting for some chance of a safe and permanent investment. With such an excess, we must ascribe the present inert condition of the business world to a feeling of insecurity engendered by the continued agitation of the question of reconstruction. If both sections would but see that the continuation of the discussion is retarding the progress of each; that the North has capital lying idle which the South needs to resuscitate her exhausted energies, and which she could have if she did but act like a sane people, much difficulty would be avoided, and mutual benefit result to both.

The bids which were opened yesterday ranged frem par for the 5 per cent to 105 for the 6 per cent. Ioan. Of the whole amount, $16,000,000 were bid for by Messrs. Jay Cooke & Co., Drexel & Co., and E. W. Clarke & Co., for themselves and a large list of persons whom they represented. The debt of the State at present, less the amount of money in the treasury, amounts to about $34,000,000 only. From this should be deducted $12,000,000 in bonds of the Pennsylvania Central, Philadelphia and Erie, and other railroads and canals, for which $11,000,000 may be considered a fair valuation. This leaves but $23,000,000 with which we are required to deal at present. When it is remembered that the debt of the State is much less than that of many of our larger cities; that it is absolutely free from all taxation, except such as is imposed on the national loans by the operation of the Income Tax law; and that a sinking fund is provided by which the whole amount can be paid off in less than seventeen years, it is easy to account for the eagerness with which bids for this new loan were sent in. It is also gratifying to learn that the greater portion of these bids were from our own citizens, who properly appreciate the superiority of this security over all others in
